QUALITY OF LIFE

Beneficiaries

- The beneficiary has the right to choose the hospice of preference.
- Hospice services are covered by Medicare Part A and most commercial plans and the Government health plan.
- The physician must certify that the beneficiary suffers from a terminal condition or illness indicating that the patient has a life expectancy of six months or less.
- The beneficiary may receive hospice services at the comfort of his or her home or at a long-term care facility.

Hospice

We offer Hospice services to patients suffering from a terminal health condition. Advanced Hospice not only focuses on the patient's physical needs when he or she is in such a fragile stage, but also on the emotional and spiritual needs of the patient's loved ones.

Advanced Hospice is an organization committed to helping the patient's family obtain the necessary resources so that they can accept the end-of-life process. Under the care of our multidisciplinary team of highly trained and committed professionals the patient and his or her loved ones will have quality of life.
